The Story & Discovery

The Discovery: Based on a classified archive of IRS Intelligence Unit memos and surveillance photos discovered in a box stored in a family attic in Woburn, MA, given to Eddy by his mother.

The Subject: Fred G. Pastore, a 6'4" East Boston native who rose to become Group Supervisor of the IRS Intelligence Unit and Chief of the "Rackets Squad" in Boston. Colleagues and press called him "The Eliot Ness of Boston."

The Timeline: Spans three decades of high-stakes investigations (1945-1985), capturing the peak of the American Mafia and the federal government's war against it.

The Secret Informant: When Robert Kennedy personally demanded Fred name his confidential informant, Fred refused and was forced to resign from the IRS. The identity of that informant remained a family secret for over 60 years, until Eddy and his cousin Bobby Pastore uncovered it during their research.

Trivia & Talking Points

The Math of Justice: The book details Fred's IRS formula for taking down kingpins: C (Cooperation) + R (Records) = J (Jail). This formula is still used by the IRS today.

Archival Photos: The book features rare photos of federal agents raiding gambling locations in East Boston, Revere, and surrounding areas.

The White House Telegram: Fred sent a Western Union telegram directly to JFK and RFK at the White House requesting an urgent meeting.

Raytheon / Cold War: Fred led undercover IRS operations inside Raytheon, the defense contractor, to root out a mob-run gambling syndicate threatening national security.

The Legacy Office: Fred's private practice, Fred G. Pastore & Associates, still operates in Lexington, MA today.
